TERNYSON'S RELIGION. Sense Identical with God. n Addington Symonds, relating a bility of manner:

"I cannot form the least notion of a brick. I don't know what it is. It's no use talking about atoms, extension, color, weight. I cannot penetrate the brick. But I have far more distinct done abreast. These strips are supported on abreast. These strips are supported on the sup color, weight. I cannot penetrate the brick. But I have far more distinct ideas of God, of love, and such emotions.

"I can sympathize with God in my poor way. The human soul seems to me always in some way—how, we do not know—identical with God. That's the value of prayer. Prayer is like opening a siulce between the great cean and our little channels."

Then of eternity and creation, he said:
"Huzley says we may have come from monkeys. That makes no difference to me. If it is God's way of creation, he sees the whole, past, present and future. But think moral good is the crown of man. But what is it without immorality." I cannot but think moral good is the crown of morality. It is in the company to a starying beggar? No; if I did not believe myself immortal.

"Thave sometimes thought men of sin might destroy their immorality. The sternity of punishment is quite incredible. Christ's words were parables to see more young mcn who try to do away with morality. They say: "We won't be moral." Comte, I believe, and persone young mcn who try to do away with morality. They say: "We won't be moral." Comte, I believe, and persone young mcn who try to do away with morality. They say: "We won't be moral." Comte, I believe, and persone young mcn who try to do away with morality has anything to do with being moral." Then from material to moral morality has anything to do with being moral." Then from material to moral morality has anything to do with being moral." Then from material to moral morality has anything to do with being moral." Then from material to moral morality has anything to do with being moral." Then from material to moral morality has anything to do with being moral." Then from material to moral before the devil began and added some-thing."

"I have travelled all through Colored and the cattle-range country almost continuously the last few years, and have been struck with the difference between the cowboy as he is and the cowboy as he is described.

"The only time I ever saw a man dressed and equipped in what may be called regulation cowboy style was a year or two ago, when two young men from New York came out, to exhaust a cowboy fever. They were armed from to toa, wore hats with larger brims than could be purchased in Colorado from end to end, high boots which must they been made to order from plans drawn by the wearers themselves, and with Winchester rifles of the heaviest possible type.

"The young men evidently thought they were obeying the injunction to do in Roems as the Romans do. A dozen or more active cowboys were present when these impatuous youths got off the cars with their equipments, and it is doubtful whether they were more surprised at the sight, or whether the surprise was not principally on the other side.
